Re: The Wind

Editor:

Elaine Weinreb's "Port of Entry" article (July 27) gave a great overview of the challenges to constructing a wind farm manufacturing hub on Humboldt Bay. This project, and the related off-shore wind farm could have far reaching impacts to Humboldt Bay. The article reports on the many challenges and impacts that were debated at the packed-house July 19 community meeting.

One thing I did not see emphasized in the article was the scale of the benefit the project could provide. Crowley (the apparent project builder) claims on its website that the project could develop 1.6 gigawatts (gw) of power — enough for 1.6 million homes (when the wind is blowing). That is more than enough to power all the homes in Humboldt County. It should also be enough power for the homes in Humboldt's 17 nearest neighboring counties, as well. The entire population of the 18 counties that stretch from Mendocino and Placer counties north to the border is just under 1.6 million people (about 500,000 households). So 1.6 gw might power not just the homes, but many of the business and institutions in these counties, as well. I agree with Jennifer Savage who, at the meeting said, "These are really noble goals that deserve support."

Can the Humboldt Bay community navigate the multitude of challenges this project presents to develop a sustainable, environmentally friendly wind industry that benefits not only the local community, but neighboring communities as well? I'm not a local resident but I am a regular reader of the North Coast Journal and I have been to a number of kinetics sculpture races. My impression is that if any community has the spirit, drive, recourse and creativity to pull this off it is this one.

Editor:

Elaine Weinreb, thank you for your informative and well-written article about the proposed wind energy project.

Clear. Comprehensive.

Good work!

Hope to see more of your articles in the future.

Michael Bruner, Eureka

Editor:

You know I love you, but the “Port of Entry” story on the Humboldt Bay Harbor District’s recent-ish meeting about the offshore wind marine terminal has me feeling sad.

First, a shoutout to my friend Luis Neuner of the Karuk people — lazily referred to in the story as “Someone identifying themselves as a ‘tribal member’” — for the thoughtful and heartfelt comments he made regarding the importance of fully engaging with regional tribes on a personal level.

Second, regarding, “Because those [timber] days have passed, much of the peninsula now sits empty, allowing plenty of room for a large industry to set up shop.” Um, empty? I mean, we have some people out here. And a lot of animals. And a lot of habitat those animals depend on and that people would like to see restored from industrial degradation for better coastal access and climate resilience. Just because we’re not covered in buildings (yet), doesn’t mean we’re empty.

Third, while I appreciate being quoted (thank you!), in the two weeks between the meeting being held and the story coming out, a least a couple of my points have been addressed: the Harbor District extended the comment period and the Times-Standard covered the pending sex trafficking allegations against Crowley (Google search for the win). The story’s datedness does a disservice to any of your readers trying to keep up on offshore wind’s onshore impacts, something those of us here on the “empty” peninsula care a lot about.

Jennifer Savage, Manila

Editor:

The recent NCJ “Port of Entry” article praises Humboldt Bay’s admirable features that can accommodate “components of the turbine ... too large to be shipped by air, rail or highway, they must travel by sea.” Humboldt Bay “has no large barriers, such as the Golden Gate Bridge, to block the entry of 1,100-foot-tall turbines being towed in and out ... such enormous component parts, the turbines must be assembled in large, clear areas very close to the water.”

Given the enormity of the project — one of the largest in the world — we might wonder, how durable are these critical features? Maybe not very.

Sea level rise threatens the jetties that ensure ingress and egress to and from the ocean to Humboldt Bay. This threat is about more than overtopping and swamping the jetties, which extend out from the land spits that anchor them. The spits themselves, their anchors, are at risk, meaning no amount of jetty armoring can prevent jetty unmooring and jettisoning. This could happen within 100 years, depending not just on warming rising seas, but also on unpredictable earthquake subsidence. Sea level rise poses an existential threat to Humboldt Bay as we know it.

Meanwhile, maintenance-free solar panels can be transported to our already built environment on small trucks, generate power, revenue and lots of jobs, tomorrow, all while protecting ocean and terrestrial habitat by leaving it undisturbed by massive industrial structures, including thousands of miles of wires and cables, abundant CO2 pollution, constant petroleum use and crowded ocean and land traffic (as shown in the Journal).

No energy system provides more resilience, or protects more biodiversity, than distributed solar, where society must concentrate its alternative energy efforts, rather than rely on grandiose, untested, experimental solutions that are a lot like those that got us here.

‘A Fantasy World’

Editor:

I attended AutoXpo in Fortuna although I am not a fan of 21st century “Retro Kar Kulture” (“AutoXpo Was Awesome; It Was Also a Symbol of Our Impending Doom,” July 27). Most were garishly modified, cut, slashed, chromed and glazed over with flashy paint. In an effort to memorialize the past, many car enthusiasts create a fantasy world of super horsepower and glitz with little substance. Perhaps, as you suggest, a symbol of our impending doom.

I am a devotee of original (stock) automobiles from the late 19th century (horseless carriages) through post-war iterations of the early 20th century. Sadly, I found few AutoXpo automobiles that were original or restored properly to their original condition. History, whether we like it or not, can be instructive.

If you are interested in authentic vehicles, I recommend the Ferndale Concours on Sunday, Sept. 10.

well-written article ("Forest Bathing in the Redwoods"), also known as Shinrin-yoku, in the June 15 issue. She did an excellent job of "describing the indescribable."

A skillful wordsmith, she captured the sensory experience ... sight, touch, sound, smell ... of what it is to be silently immersed in the giant redwoods. We were "arm-chair forest bathing" with her.

Kudos for her awareness of both the value of the sheer beauty of the forest and the immeasurable health benefits of forest bathing. New science-based studies have shown that phytochemicals emitted by trees are especially beneficial for the human body. Our nature cancer fighting system is boosted by spending even a short time in the woods. Japanese corporations now pay to send stressed employees into the forest, boosting health and happiness, reducing work absences.

Simona and her friend Lissa are serious forest bathers, hiking in a heavy drizzle. All-weather forest bathers are a special breed!

There is just such a group here. We faithful forest bathers meet locally in Eureka every Friday, at 1:45 p.m. at the T and Glatt streets fountain, rain or shine, for a "bath" in Sequoia Park. This 90 minutes of Tai chi/Qigong Silent Practice allows us to absorb the phytochemicals given off by the trees. We lower our stress, improve our mood and boost our immune system, all in under two hours, and the trees do the work. We play. The result is astounding ... pure magic.

Sequoia Park, a natural resource for healing our community, is accessible. Mother Nature's green pharmacy is open every day ... full of good vibes for all.

Thanks, Simona, for your inspiration.

Councilmember, Firefighter, Volunteer Mel Berti Dies at 84

By Thadeus Greenson

thad@northcoastjournal.com

Mel Berti, a born and raised Fortunan who dedicated much of his life to the betterment of the Friendly City, compiling a decades-long record of public service in the process, died July 22. He was 84.

Known equally as the longtime and beloved butcher at Hoby's Market in Scotia, the 28-year Fortuna council member, the decades-long Humboldt County Fair director, the near lifelong volunteer firefighter and the voice of Fortuna High School football, Berti occupied an iconic, almost ever-present role in Fortuna.

"He truly cared about his community and he was always willing to help wherever it was needed," says Mayor Tammi Trent. "He was just a very giving person, very caring."

Berti grew up in Fortuna and attended Fortuna schools, and Fortuna Volunteer Fire Chief Rus Brown says he was once stunned to find in the department's archives a photo of Berti as a high school student, jumping out of a window at Fortuna High School to respond to a fire at the start of what would become a 53-year stint as a volunteer firefighter with the department.

When Berti could no longer meet the physical rigors of fighting fires, he moved on to serve two stints on the department's board of directors, always looking for a way to help out.

Brown says some of his most prominent memories of Berti are responding to the scenes of car crashes with the department to find Berti, off duty but already on scene, sometimes in his butcher's apron on his way home from work, directing traffic.

"It didn't matter what time, day or night, he was always willing to help," Brown says, adding that Berti also had a gift for handling even the most gruesome of accidents, noting that some people can't handle the gore, emotion and fear at the scenes. "He was just one that could. He always made that chaos calm, and that's not an art that many have."

Trent says it was Berti who launched her career in politics, appointing her to the Fortuna Planning Commission some 20 years ago. Trent says Berti — a friend of her mother's — always encouraged her to give back to her community through public service, even when she wasn't sure she had it in herself, telling her, "You need to be mayor."

Having now served on the planning commission, the city council and in the mayor's office, Trent says she has a different appreciation for how much Berti gave through 28 years on the city council and two stints as mayor.

"It's a very time consuming job, and it's pretty close to a volunteer job," she says. "You have to love it to do it. But that's how important the city is to him."

While not serving on the council or cutting steaks at Hoby's, Berti volunteered much of his time coaching youth sports, umpiring baseball games, officiating basketball games, working in snack bars and grooming city fields, taking his role as the city council's parks and recreation liaison to the extreme.

He also volunteered his time as the play-by-play commentator for Fortuna High School football, making sure parents and grandparents who couldn't attend the games could be a part of the action.

Berti's love of sports and civic service coalesced in the late 1980s, when he played a "pivotal role" in the acquisition and development of Newburg Park, according to a city press release.

"Fortuna has seen significant changes in Mel's 28 years on the council; one constant that cannot be overlooked is Mel

Mel Berti Fortuna Volunteer Fire Department

Berti's love and support of our children and park system," former City Manager Duane Rigge wrote in an Oct. 4, 2010, staff report requesting the city officially rename the baseball/soccer field in Newburg Park after Berti.

Brown says Berti was so many things to so many people, he took on a celebrity status around the Friendly City.

"Mel knew everyone in town, so it always felt like you were talking to a friend when you were talking to Mel," he says. "He was a friend to everyone — just a positive person and someone who knew everyone and was a friend to everyone."

Berti also dedicated 15 years of his life volunteering on the Humboldt County Fair Association Board of Directors until stepping down in November, served 28 years on the Fortuna Rodeo Board and was named Fortuna's citizen of the year in 2006.

Fortuna Councilmember Mike Losey says he's known Berti for more than 30 years and appreciates all of his dedication to the city, though he mostly appreciates the simple interactions he had with the man.

Most recently, those came at the Campton Heights Market, where Berti worked as a butcher after moving on from more than 30 years of managing Hoby's meat department.

"I could go into the meat section and ask Mel for a prime rib, ribeye steak or any kind of cut of meat and he would go cut it on the spot," Losey says.

Carmen Glass, who serves as both the Fortuna Volunteer Fire District's secretary and captains its Company 4 in Hydesville, says she got to know Berti 42 years ago through her first husband.

She says she and Berti bonded over a love of collecting old antique bottles, with Berti guiding her on how to find old homestead sites and dig for them with homemade bottle probes. It was a passion they shared, she says.

Glass says Berti had a good sense of humor and was always looking to make connections, to help out where he could, but says he also wasn't shy with his opinions.

"He told it like it is," she says. "If he had an opinion, he made sure you knew what it was. He wasn't someone who just agreed with you to agree with you. And believe me, he didn't always agree."

But she says he also wasn't one to take disagreements personally.

"He was just an extremely — just a very giving individual," Glass says. "Up until the end, he wanted to serve his community in every possible mode that he could, you know. I don't think he ever wanted to retire from anything. Whether it was his job, firefighter, commissioner — he did it all until he couldn't do it anymore."

Berti's family is planning a celebration Oct. 29 at the River Lodge in Fortuna. ●

Leon Warmuth, who in 1952 boarded a bus to Eureka with just $50 in hand and all his belongings packed into a cardboard suitcase and went on to build a thriving business and become the Eureka Chamber of Commerce's president, died July 20, surrounded by friends and family. He was 90.

The city of Eureka announced July 26 that it would fly its flags at half-staff to honor the founder of Leon's Car Care Center, describing him as a "self-made business owner ... who contributed generously to the city of Eureka." But while Warmuth's business acumen and gifts with cars were undeniable, he will be remembered by those who knew him more for his kind heart, easy smile and appreciation for life than anything he did professionally.

"He was a man of small stature but to know him was to love him," says Addie Dunaway, who became Warmuth's neighbor in 2019 when she and her husband moved next door and quickly developed a close relationship with Warmuth and his family. "His love for his family, for his life, for everything that he created — his legacy — you could just feel it. We knew from that very first moment that we were part of something very special and we became such good friends."

According to his son Dale Warmuth, Leon Warmuth was born the fifth of sixth children of a sharecropper in San Joaquin, California, near Fresno. Around his 12th birthday, the family realized Leon's spine was afflicted with scoliosis and he was sent to live at Shriner's Hospital in San Francisco, where, some six hours away from his family home, he underwent daily physical therapy. By the time he returned home, World War II had begun and while Leon's brothers deployed, he was unfit for duty and remained stateside. Living through the war, which saw one of his brothers shot down and become a prisoner of war, made Leon "unwaveringly patriotic," according to his son.

When Leon became old enough to drive, he found a new independence and what would become a lifelong love of automobiles. He graduated from Tranquility High School and attended junior college, studying automotive mechanics and fabrication. But Dale Warmuth says his father came to feel he needed a fresh start and soon set off for Eureka to live with his sister Wilma and her husband Fred Butterworth, with a bus ticket bought by his brother and that cardboard suitcase bought by his other sister.

He soon bought an old fixer upper truck, Dale Warmuth says, and quickly forged many new friendships in Eureka's car community, including out at the Samoa air strip drag races. His first job was within the parts department of Debon Motors, and he went on to work at Peterbilt, Finnegan Nason Auto Parts and Gustafson Chevrolet.

When pilots complained of the drag racing at the air strip, Leon and others solicited the help of then Councilmember Orval Wilson to find a solution, and thus the foundation of the Samoa Drag Strip was laid.

"Somewhere in this mix of work, dad met my mother Elaine," Dale Warmuth says. "Folklore says it was at Maro's Drive-in."

They married in 1956 and Dale was born in 1958, with Elaine giving birth to a daughter, Carrie, three years later.

With Leon's hot rod work having developed a following, he and Elaine soon asked Elaine's uncle George Hartman for $900 so Leon could start his own shop — "Why $900?," Dale Warmuth asks rhetorically. "Because it sounded like so much less than $1,000."

Thus, Leon's Brake and Muffler was born, soon becoming Leon's Muffler Service and later — under his children's management — Leon's Car Care Center, as the business steadily grew and moved from location to location.

Over the years, Leon started racing but left to build race cars for Jim Walker that “were quite successful at Redwood Acres,” according to Dale Warmuth.

Over the years, with Elaine’s encouragement, Leon committed to spending more time with family and finding new hobbies, specifically gardening, and they bought a country home on the Klamath River near Bluff Creek where “the whole family grew up,” as Dale Warmuth puts it.

Around the same time, Leon became a member of the Eureka Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors, later becoming president in 1990.

But as the years passed, Leon spent more and more time away from the business, poring it instead into the garden at his and Elaine’s forever home in Eureka, where Dale says “they gardened in the most enormous ways.”

Dunaway says she will never forget meeting Leon for the first time, saying she became a member of the Facebook page Barns of Humboldt County after she and Mike bought the house next to the Warmuth’s in 2019 and one day noticed he’d posted a picture of the barn on their property. The next day, Mike and Addie went over to introduce themselves and were immediately smitten, saying they were taken with Leon’s open heart, interest in all things, pride in his family and desire to soak up what life had to offer, something she ascribes to the fact scoliosis taught him not to take things for granted as a child.

“He was told he wasn’t going to survive very long and, basically, the family should put him in a home and leave him alone,” she says. “Against all odds, he didn’t just survive, he thrived.”

She says she was taken with the way Leon collected things, from postcards and local yearbooks to hot wheel cars, and the joy things seemed to bring him.

A couple of years ago, she says Leon told her and Mike that he was going to install a gate between their properties so when he passed they could come care for Elaine. Dunaway says she wanted to push back but didn’t.

“There were certain things where you teased him or argued with him about, and then there were certain things where you knew you needed to let him have his say,” she says. “That was a moment when we needed to let him have his say.”

Dunaway says calls have already been made to a company about installing that gate, which Leon never managed as his health failed.

In his last years, as mobility increasingly became a challenge, Dunaway says she was struck by the way Leon was so intent on taking in the world around him, saying he’d spend hours sitting in his yard. When work was being done at the Dunaway home, he’d watch and document it.

“To him, the activity taking place next door, he was just thrilled, sitting in a chair in the garden, watching what was going on,” she says.

Leon is survived by Elaine, his wife of more than 65 years, and his children Dale and Carrie, and will be missed by many, including dear friends Mike Cahill, Gary Wahlund, Jewell Hendricks and Jerry Brazil.

“Leon was astounded in the life he looked back on,” Dale Warmuth says. “He felt so lucky with life, wife, family, business, friends and the chance to share his good fortune.”

In the official city press release announcing Warmuth’s death, Mayor Kim Bergel calls him a “great asset to the city,” saying, “Eureka is a better place because of Leon and the Warmuth family.”

Dunaway agrees, and says it’s hard to express how grateful she is for the profound connection she and Mike were able to make with Leon in just a few short years. Asked about her lasting memories of Leon, she recalls a recent time when she was driving in town and saw a car with an I-heart-Leon bumper sticker.

“I saw this bumper sticker and thought everyone should have someone like that, someone they can look up to and admire, someone who can provide some elder guidance, someone who just has a gentle, open heart like that.”

She pauses.

“If everyone could be a little more like Leon, the world would be a better place,” she says. ●

NCJ BEST OF HUMBOLDT 2022

North Coast Condor Flock Spreads Its Wings

Humboldt County's eight California condors are branching out, venturing for an overnight stay on the Yurok Reservation near Blue Creek last week, marking their first exploration of the lower Klamath River.

A little more than a year has passed since the first two of the endangered birds with a nearly 10-foot wingspan, known to the Yurok Tribe as prey-go-neesh, took flight into Humboldt County skies for the first time in more than a century.

Since that day in May of 2022, six additional condors have joined the flock now flying free as part of the Northern California Condor Restoration Program, a partnership between the Yurok Tribe and Redwood National and State Parks.

"Though some of the condors have visited the reservation in the past, for short periods of time, this is the first instance of birds roosting overnight on tribal lands near the river," a social media post by the tribe states, noting where the birds were was about 20 miles from the release site in the Bald Hills area. "Though 20 miles may not seem far for a species that can fly as many as 200 miles in a day, this is a significant distance for these young birds who are still learning their new home, and without the benefit of an older established population to show them the way. As large soaring birds, condors are reliant on high winds created by mountains, river corridors, and coastal areas to maneuver across the landscape. Yurok and surrounding territories are ideal in this respect, as our complex topography provides ample condor 'highways.'"

According to the post, the condors — which are tracked using transmitters attached to their wings — have also traveled as far south as Kneeland and as far north as the Klamath River near Weitchpec.

"As the condors soar over new landscapes, they are constantly searching for food and good roosting opportunities, and becoming more familiar with wind and weather patterns within their range,"

Condors A3 and A2 stretch their wings.

the post states. "When the birds reach breeding age, at about 5 or 6 years, these exploratory flights will also reveal potential nesting locations."

With the flock now ranging from 2-to-3-years-old, that's still a few years down the road and, as NCCRP manager Chris West explained to the Journal last year, without any adult condors around to show them the ropes, it might take these birds a bit of time to figure out the logistics of mating, something that's he said has been observed at other new release sites.

Eventually, though, nature finds a way and one pair or more will connect the dots and the others will follow suit, West said.

Later this year, according to the tribe, the restoration program plans to release another cohort of condors, which will continue every year for at least 20 years.

Held sacred by many Indigenous tribes, in Yurok tradition the condor is believed to be among the Earth's first creatures and the one who carries their prayers to the Creator.

"The primary goal of the Yurok Tribe-initiated condor restoration effort is to establish a self-sustaining prey-go-neesh population in the heart of the bird's former range," the post states.

For the news as it develops and all you need to understand politics, people and art on the North Coast, follow us online.

A Festival Without Salmon: The Yurok Tribe announced with a "heavy heart" that the namesake of the annual Klamath Salmon Festival will not be served at this year's Aug. 19 event due to record low runs that also led to the closure of the California fishery. Now in its 59th year, the festival will include a plethora of activities, vendors, games and demonstrations, but no salmon. "This decision reflects our sacred responsibility to take care of the Klamath River's fish stocks," said Yurok Tribe Chair Joseph L. James in a press release. POSTED 08.01.23

Airport Closure Looms: In case you forgot, those travelling out of county this month may have limited options. The California Redwood Coast-Humboldt County Airport will be completely closed Aug. 14 through Aug. 25 as crews mill 2 inches of pavement off the airport's primary runway, replacing them with 6 inches of new pavement. Announced back in March, the closure will apply to all commercial flights and comes as Cal Poly Humboldt students are slated to return to class Aug. 17. The university says it has encouraged students to plan ahead. POSTED 07.31.23

State Forbids Mandatory Unmasking: For at least another year and a half, California employers won't be able to follow In-N-Out's lead in a banning workers from wearing masks on the job. The state's COVID-19 workplace rules protecting workers' rights to decide for themselves whether to wear face coverings are locked in at least until February 2025, scuttling the fast food giant from applying its new policy prohibiting workers from wearing masks, at least in California, where it operates about 70 percent of its restaurants, including the recently opened Eureka location. POSTED 07.27.23

We're face-painting, wave-starting fans of Humboldt County to begin with. But the Best of Humboldt issue is where we get to wave our foam fingers and cheer for the home team's stars: the people, places, businesses and more nominated and voted No. 1 by you, our readers. It's tough out there on the field, so enjoy the accolades for our hometown team and bask in the Gatorade dumping and locker room Champagne spraying on behalf of this year's champions.

Did your beloved burrito score this year? Did your favorite band make it across the finish line? Peruse the trophy case of winners to see final results and hit us with your post-game opinions. If it didn't go your way, don't worry, kid. There's always next year.

MIMI KYOKO WAGNER AT TOMO JAPANESE RESTAURANT

Mimi Kyoko Wagner laughs and wipes the start of a tear from corners of her eyes, careful not to smudge her cat-eye liner. "I love Tomo. I love our food, I love how busy we get," she says, adding, "It's a beautiful dance that we do here. And I love our customers." The customers seem to feel the love, too, voting her Humboldt's Best Server.

Wagner has been zipping around Tomo with trays of teriyaki and Tomodachi cocktails for 26 years. "I've seen couples come together and then the belly growing and a baby and now the kid's in college," she says with a giggle. After moving from Japan to Germany to California as a kid, she says she's happy to have put down roots in Humboldt and at the restaurant where so many people come together for birthdays and catch-ups. In fact, she's made good friends and family of some of the regulars and staff who frequent the Arcata Plaza icon. "We are quite the team," she says of owner Joe Doherty, who's been there with her the whole time. She's proud of the whole staff for pulling off Best Happy Hour this year, too. "I'd like to just give thanks to Humboldt County for this," she says, beaming. Toast her the next time you swing by — she loves a celebration.

BOB'S FOOTLONGS

Listen, Humboldt. I like bargains and nitrates as much as the next broad. But Costco's multiple wins for Best Hot Dog in Humboldt were a bad look for us as a county. Every year, I prayed before the altar of Frankfurter-scented candles in my office as the voting began ... to no avail. But at last, Bob's Footlong has won the prize and rescued a little of our dignity. Six months ago, owners Jessica and Daniel Milch reopened the Fortuna institution, to the relief of longtime customers. "It's going great, we have a great group of employees," says Jessica. "I couldn't ask for a better crew or better customers." Business has been brisk. "We don't get a lot of downtime to celebrate," she says, "but we definitely cheered amongst the crew."

The Milches have streamlined the menu, offering build-your-own options and bringing back the 73-year-old business' original chili recipe for its bestselling chili cheese dogs. They split the footlong sausage lengthwise before grilling and melt cheese on top. Then it goes on the warm bun for a hit of mustard, a ladle of that meat and bean chili, and a handful of chopped white onion. Take a moment to appreciate the balance, the bouquet. Then keep the napkins close as you dig in and savor the victory.

a billboard on the Las Vegas
Strip, his flagship show Diners, Drive-Ins and Dives turned 15, he'd launched a new show (Guy's Game Night) and expanded his restaurant empire to more than 85 worldwide, all while in the midst of a massively lucrative Food Network TV deal.

Eureka's Sara Bareilles clearly had to up her game if she wanted to keep her Best Local Celebrity crown. The Eureka native was not daunted, it turns out, and sauntered past the Eel River Valley, asking Fieri to hold her proverbial Donkey Sauce, on her way to an epic homecoming, throwing a massive, free concert that drew some 15,000 people to Eureka's Halvorsen Park, making it one of the largest events in the city's history.

And when Bareilles took the stage, she simply wowed with a 17-song set that included her biggest hits, played through a world-class sound system from a professional stage her crews had seemingly materialized out of nowhere. Perhaps more importantly, it was authentic. While her talent was on full display, so were her care, humility, kindness and strength, as she thanked everyone who'd had a hand in making the day possible, implored the crowd to be good to one another and urged everyone to fight for a woman's right to choose.

File

"It's my prayer for the world — that we not give up on each other," she said from the stage as the sun began to set over Humboldt Bay.

What could be better?

HUMBOLDT CRABS BASEBALL

Ah, the old ball game. Sun shining, the aroma of grilled burgers, hot dogs and fried mini donuts. Smiling, sunglass-wearing beer stewards slinging frosty ones to regulars who've brought their reusable steel cups. Add to this scene a field of freshly cut grass surrounding a raked dirt diamond, a joyous crowd of diverse fans and an orange crustacean in a snappy white uniform shaking claws with fans and posing for pics. Yep, you're at a Humboldt Crabs baseball game at the Arcata Ball Park.

Humboldt Crabs games are the epitome of small-town, community baseball — that perfect blend of nostalgia, camaraderie and a genuine love for the sport. You're bound to run into half a dozen friends, neighbors, colleagues or that guy from the plaza whose face you've known for years. Strangers in the stands quickly become friends as the World Famous Crab Grass Band honks out "Sweet Caroline," tucked in with the hecklers and diehards on the first base line. Kids, decked out in Crabs gear from head to toe, race to and from the snack bar and run the bases on Sundays. It's no wonder Journal readers have voted the Crabs the Best Local Sports Program.

And let's not forget our house, Arcata Ball Park. It's got shiny new, sturdier bleachers and cap tips to the trailblazers — those wooden replicas of Crabs jerseys hanging on the chain link fence immortalizing Crabs founders and players. We're proud of our Crabbies, the oldest continually operated summer collegiate baseball team in America, doing the deal since 1945.

CALISTA LABOLLE

Humboldt's best vocalist and stand-up comic walk into a bar, and they're both Calista LaBolle. Her last name may be familiar since her father is drummer Mike LaBolle. Her mother Brooke Exley sang with some bands locally in the '80s as well — a strong musical pedigree for the singer/songwriter. "I'm really bad about getting them recorded but I have a couple songs on Bandcamp," she says. There you can sample her clear, strong voice singing soulful ballads like "Last Night," "Believe" and "It Takes Work." Lately she's been playing piano and singing with guitarist Sam Borrello, and you can catch her singing at Living Doll Vintage in Eureka during Arts Alive in September.

Comedy came later, after about a year of sitting in the audience at stand-up shows and making her own notes, Calista LaBolle finally hit the stage herself in 2019. Initially, her material was "a way to make fun of my dating experiences," including the raunchy, awkward and sometimes depressing business of meeting people on apps and/or in our small social pool. Sex, she noted during one show, "is great foreplay for when he leaves." She produces a monthly show at Humboldt Bay Provisions each Thursday before Arts Alive — if you pick this up in time, she'll be there Aug. 3. — and is frequently on the bill at the Savage Henry Comedy Club. Don't be surprised if there's a little singing.

WILDWOOD MUSIC CO.

Wildwood Music, Arcata's hometown music store since 1974, is housed in a cozy spot on I Street, with a colorful mural painted on its outside wall, sharing the stretch of road with two other iconic Arcata businesses, the North Coast Co-op and Los Bagels.

Inside is a musician's paradise with rows of guitars and banjos, enough to bless Humboldt with another dozen or so bluegrass bands. Dobros, drums, didgeridoos, amps, egg shakers, keyboards, strings, sheet music, books and more — Wildwood pulls out all the stops with a diverse and comprehensive inventory and a knowledgeable and helpful staff. And Journal readers have taken note, voting it Best Music Store.

Time to change your tune? Trade in your old Fender for something new. Wildwood has a sweet inventory of used and vintage instruments. And Wildwood Music is also your go-to for instrument repair and maintenance for the ones you'll never part with. While nothing beats the in-person music store browsing, hands-on experience, Wildwood Music also offers the convenience of online browsing and ordering. With all of this and nearly 50 years in business, Wildwood Music is second fiddle to none, deserving of the title Best Music Store.

HAPPY DOG DAY CARE AND BOARDING

Dogs are our best friends, protectors, confidants, travel companions and beloved members of our families, so we take care of them like the good hoomans we are. So, when it's time for us to go to work or out of town, a doggie daycare that takes the worry out of leaving our precious pups for a few hours or days is worth its weight in golden retrievers. No one knows that better than the discerning dog owners of Humboldt who have voted Happy Dog the Best Doggie Daycare.

What makes Happy Dog the top dog? Safety and security are No. 1, with fenced indoor and outdoor play areas featuring K9Grass, a synthetic turf made specifically for dogs. Dogs play with others of similar size and temperament to ensure compatibility and avoid any scraps or scrapes.

Monitors throughout the facility ensure the staff always has eyes on the dogs and doggie play doesn't get too ruff. The staff are also experienced, well-trained and genuinely love and understand dogs. They offer free dog training with the cost of daycare and boarding, using only positive reinforcement. That's biscuit worthy. And staying there is also like a spa day, thanks to onsite groomers Bubble Buddies.

Piped in music? Check. Heated floors with bedding? Check. State-of-the-art security with nighttime observation? Check. And Happy Dog also requires all dogs to be up to date on vaccinations and have health checks to ensure the safety of all the animals under their care. Happy Dog, happy life.

FOOD FOR PEOPLE

There's no way around the fact that it's been a challenging stretch for Humboldt County's food bank, Food for People. A city sewer leak inundated its main facility in Eureka in February of 2020, rendering the place unusable just a month before COVID-19 shut everything down.

The pandemic not only sent demand for Food for People's services skyrocketing to unprecedented levels, it also forced most of the nonprofit's volunteer base to stay home and required new, dispersed, contact-free delivery methods. The nonprofit pivoted with aplomb and didn't miss a beat.

Three years later the pandemic has receded but the need for free, nutritious food in Humboldt County has not. As we reported just last month ("Hunger in Humboldt," July 20), 14 percent of Humboldt County residents are considered food insecure, meaning they lack "consistent access to enough food for every person in a household to live an active, healthy life," according to Feeding America, which is significantly worse than the national average of 10 percent and the third-highest food insecurity rate in the state. The bottom line is that in a county where the median annual household income is around $54,000 and studies show a household would need to earn about $74,000 to be considered self-sufficient, lots are struggling to make ends meet.

So we're all fortunate Food for People has not only been scrambling to pick up the slack for almost 45 years now, but also that it has seemingly emerged from the pandemic stronger than ever. It recently opened its new Eureka Choice Pantry, offering food pick-up three days a week, as well as child nutrition programs and services for home-bound seniors. With all that in mind, it's no wonder Food for People nabbed the trifecta this year of Best Cause, Best Nonprofit and Best Volunteer Opportunity.

If you're hungry, know Food for People is there to help and reach out [(707) 445-3166, foodforpeople.org]. And if you're lucky enough not to be, consider donating or volunteering because some of your neighbors sure are. And as awesome as it is, Food for People can't do its best without others pitching in their best.

JASON GELLMAN, RIDGELINE FARMS

Jason Gellman had no idea his Ridgeline Farms had won Best Local Cannabis Farm, or that he'd won Best Cultivator. Not only did he not campaign for the honors, but he didn't even know Ridgeline was a finalist until the Journal called.

Nonetheless, he thinks it's pretty cool — not because it's a recognition his cannabis flowers are top shelf (they are, and he's got multiple Emerald Cup trophies to prove it) — but because it's a recognition that the dream is attainable, that the small, family cannabis farm can be viable even as markets crash, and that Humboldt County continues to produce the best cannabis in the world.

"I'm doing this to represent Humboldt. I've been raised here. I raised my kids here. And this is where I will live forever," Gellman says. "I'm not the best at all. I'm surrounded by the best, and I'm just one of them. We're from a community of amazing cultivators."

Gellman is frank about the economic challenges. "So many of my family and friends are hurting so bad right now," he says. "If you drive through Garberville, it's a ghost town."

Ridgeline survives, he says, because it's lean. "Yeah, my jars are selling, my bags are selling and I have some clothing that sells — but most of all, I don't have workers. ...

It's me, my wife, our kids ... it's mostly us working our asses off on a small farm." He says he cultivates 96,000 square feet — about 2 acres — of the farm where they live, which allows him to seek out prime genetics from seed, through trials and eventually to scale — and also see each plant through to harvest.

"I'm hands on," he says. "I look at every individual plant. I've been doing this for 30-plus years. It's attention to detail and actual pride and love for what I'm doing. It makes all the difference in the world."

The Humboldt Folklife Festival's Barn Dance on Friday featured host band Cidermill with caller Lyndsey Battle that brought out a big all-ages crowd and lots of smiles on the faces of the dancers.

The Compost Mountain Boys attracted a dancing crowd with their bluegrass music at the Dell'Arte Amphitheater Stage on Saturday.

Folklife Strums On

Story and Photos by Mark Larson
getout@northcoastjournal.com

Many of Humboldt County's finest local musicians could be found at this year's Humboldt Folklife Festival. The week-long lineup of offerings by local musicians started with the new Folk School Day on Sunday in Blue Lake, with free classes on bluegrass guitar, banjo, mandolin, percussion, songwriting and singing.

The traditional Songwriter Showcase on Tuesday featured local songwriters Matthew Wallace, Bruce Taylor, Zera Starchild and Claire Bent indoors at Dell'Arte. Patrick Cleary led an insightful Q&A with them after each played and sang their original music to get their backstory and how they go about writing their music, revealing glimpses of their personalities and methods.

Wednesday evening's sold-out show outside at Dell'Arte moved from before sunset to literally "Under the Stars" with sets by Ponies of Harmony, Sequoia Rose and festival favorites Huckleberry Flint. Thursday night featured Bluegrass and Beyond with Rise & Bloom, Fickle Hill and Horse Mountain outdoors at Dell'Arte.

Friday night attracted an all-ages crowd for a lively, sweaty indoor barn dance at the Arcata Veterans Hall with host band

Cidermill and caller Lyndsey Battle.

Crowds of fans of local bands showed up in sunny Blue Lake on Saturday to catch 16 bands playing from mid-morning until sunset on two outdoor stages at Dell'Arte. The All Day Free Festival featured Eric Leong, Soul A Mente, Kray van Kirk, Sari Baker, Julio Perdido, Blueberry Hill Boogie Band, Vanishing Pints and the Beatles Sing Along on the Street Stage. The Amphitheater Stage included: Humboldt Taiko, The Oyster Baes, A Drop of the Pure, Grupo Mar Pacifico, Compost Mountain Boys, Canary and the Vamp, Country Pretenders, Oh Mercy and Cadillac Ranch.

Full details about the Humboldt Folklife Society's Folklife Festival and coming events (including the Buddy Brown Blues Festival Aug. 19) are available at humboldt-folklife.com.

Quillback Rockfish Off the Menu Starting Aug. 7

By Kenny Priest

fishing@northcoastjournal.com

The California Department of Fish and Wildlife projects the combined recreational and commercial take of quillback rockfish will exceed the harvest limits specified in federal regulation for 2023 is prohibiting retention of the fish statewide in both the recreational and commercial fisheries effective Aug. 7.

From the CDFW July 28 announcement:

"The 2021 stock assessment for quillback rockfish off California indicated severe population declines. As a result, a recreational one-fish limit and reduced commercial limits were implemented in 2022 to reduce catch. Further constraints to the groundfish seasons for 2023 have not sufficiently reduced catch for quillback rockfish to meet federal harvest guidelines."

CDFW urges anglers to use best fishing practices to reduce impacts to quillback rockfish and other prohibited species. These include reducing mortality when releasing fish by utilizing a descending device and relocating to different fishing grounds or switching targets if you are catching and releasing quillback rockfish or other prohibited species."

The Rockfish, Cabezon, Greenling (RCG) complex bag and possession limit will remain 10 fish daily, with a one-fish sub-bag limit for copper rockfish, and a four-fish sub-bag limit for vermilion rockfish. Along with quillback rockfish, take of bronzedspotted rockfish, cowcod and yelloweye rockfish continue to be prohibited year-round at all depths. ..."

CDFW will continue to monitor groundfish species of concern, such as quillback rockfish. If the current in-season change prohibiting take of quillback rockfish is not sufficient to reduce harvest, additional in-season actions such as modifications to the season dates and/or depth constraints may be implemented. Anglers are strongly encouraged to minimize catch of quillback rockfish and other prohibited species to reduce the possibility of further in-season actions in 2023 and beyond."

The Oceans:

Eureka

A few fishable days provided some good Pacific halibut fishing, according to Tim Klasen of Reel Steel Sport Fishing. "The bite has been excellent and limits have been coming quickly, if you're located in a good spot," said Klassen. "Most of the action has been between the 45 and 52 lines, and there's fish scattered throughout. Most are still coming between 250 to 300 feet. The good news is the black cod seem to have lessened, but there's still plenty of Hake to deal with. Rock fishing remains excellent at the Cape, but the lingcod bite is still on the slow side."

Shelter Cove

"Fishing was a little slower for a few days this week, but we still managed limits of rockfish each day," said Jake Mitchell of Sea Hawk Sport Fishing. "We did have a couple days of lingcod limits as well, but overall lingcod fishing remains slow. We've been fishing off the Ranch House and down as far as Mistake Point. There are lots of anchovies in the harbor, but so far not very many California halibut. The salmon are thick in there as well so it's hard to get a presentation on the bottom. Ocean conditions have been crappy for weeks and no one has gone Pacific halibut fishing since the Fourth of July week."

Crescent City

According to Britt Carson of Crescent City's Englund Marine, quite a few California halibut are now being caught daily. "On a good day, we're seeing 10 to 15 caught along South Beach," said Carson. "And we're seeing some big ones too. I've seen quite a few better than 30 inches, including one that measured 42. There hasn't been much effort for Pacific halibut lately, seems that everyone has what they need. The rockfish and lingcod bite are still wide open when the boats can get out. Both reefs are producing quality limits."

Quillback rockfish, like the one pictured here, will be prohibited from retention statewide effective Aug. 7 for both recreational and commercial fisheries.

Lower Klamath

Steelhead continue to trickle into the lower river, but as of the weekend there weren't any big concentrations. More fish should begin to show up through the first few weeks of August. The daily bag limit is two hatchery steelhead or hatchery trout per day on both the Klamath and Trinity rivers, with a possession limit of four. Anglers must have a Steelhead Fishing Report and Restoration Card in their possession while fishing for steelhead trout in anadromous waters. For more information, visit nrm.dfg.ca.gov/FileHandler.ashx?DocumentID=202686&inline.

COMMUNITY FEATURE

The Humboldt Light Opera Company

Featuring: Nickelodeon The SpongeBob Musical
August 4th-19th at the Van Duzer Theater

"The SpongeBob Musical" will be performed Aug. 4, 5, 11 and 18 at 7 p.m. and Aug. 6, 13 and 19 at 2 p.m. To purchase tickets for the show starting later this week, go to <https://www.hloc.org/>.

The musical is based on the series by Stephen Hillenburg, a 1984 graduate of Humboldt State University (Cal Poly Humboldt). Stakes are higher than ever before as SpongeBob and all of Bikini Bottom face the total annihilation of their undersea world. Chaos erupts. Lives hang in the balance. And just when all hope seems lost, a most unexpected hero rises up and takes center stage.

Murphy's Markets opened in 1971 and just two years later in 1973, the curtains first went up at Humboldt Light Opera Company. Founders of both companies probably had no idea how successful they would become. Although 'community' is not in their name, it has always been at the heart of both organizations.

Humboldt Light Opera Company's headquarters are located just across the way from Murphy's Market in Sunnybrae. Humboldt Light Opera Company's goal for over 50 years has been to bring musical theatre to the people of our community – not just as a viewing experience, but also as a performing experience for those who have dreamed of taking the stage themselves.

The Best of the Rest

By Collin Yeo

music@northcoastjournal.com

A quick congratulations are in order for everyone and everywhere that won a coveted Best of Humboldt award in this issue. We are all of us winners for getting to live in a place as packed with the sort of folks who make up our artistic population. Keep it up, please. I did want to take a moment to throw out a quick thumbs up to a few of our less tangible experiences, though, in the pursuit of an esoteric, solipsistic round-up of some of the stuff that I enjoy around these parts. I would like to start with weird houses. Thanks to a loose attitude towards home decor and a happy dearth of severe HOA culture in most parts of our county, I'd like to give a shout out to those of you who paint your homes in bizarre color schemes, keep up seasonal — particularly Halloween — decorations up year round and generally do what it takes to make your home “that house” on the block.

Next up, and this was a tough one with steep competition, I'd like to award the area from the Millyard to Almquist Lumber in North Arcata as having the best summer scent of the river without an attendant view. As a journeyman carpenter and handyman, I can't tell you how many times I've been shopping for materials when I catch a whiff of running water and riparian vegetation, and immediately think about leaving everything behind to hurl myself into the water for a nice swim.

I'm going to have to also give a shout-out to the area around St. Mary's and Greenwood cemeteries as 2023's best cat neighborhood. There are so many of those whimsical little furballs lazing around the place, it's always a treat to stroll through and dispense a few pettings. McKinleyville's dump is by far my favorite destination for dispensing of waste, both household and work generated. The bucolic setting, double-barreled weigh stations and Zen garden-like layout always puts my brain back into the calm space of simple being.

Out of selfishness, I won't be sharing my favorite blackberry picking spot, nor my favorite beach, birdwatching spot or hiking trail. I will, however, share in the pleasure of knowing that you all know the protective feeling of possessiveness that comes with recalling these spots.

Have fun, now.

Thursday

The summer concert experience at the Fieldbrook Winery drifts on tonight at 5:30 p.m. with Grateful Dead tribute band Dead On providing free entertainment for those who have made table reservations.

Friday

The Miniplex presents the return of one-of-a-kind cosmic puppeteer, musical act and alumnus of Tim and Eric's Awesome Show, David Liebe Hart. I can't do much justice to the man that Googling his clips won't do better, so all you need to know is that the show is 8 p.m., the opening act is DJ 0.000001, aka nyege nyege, and tickets are $15, $10 advance.

Saturday

I have two festivals to recommend today, each on either end of our county's share of the 101. First up on the northside at 3 p.m., RampArt Skate Park is home to Bushfest, a metal-palooza full of shredders and screamers, priced at a very reasonable $20 for 13 bands, $15 if you get an early-bird ticket. A few among the line-up include The Sturgeons, Wastewalker, Racket, No Living Witness, Bloodspire and, of course, the hosts Greybush.

An hour later down Redway way at the Mateel, you will find a celebration of the once-massive Reggae on the River, now called Reggae Legacy and scaled for one day of good jams. The headliner is BLVK H3RO, a young Jamaican singer whose resumé of collaborations is full of top-notch global talent like UB40 and the late Bunny Wailer. Also on deck is the Brooklyn crew Subatomic Sound System, who provided backing band tour support for icon Lee “Scratch” Perry when the master was still inhabiting this earthly realm. The group will be performing a memorial set of the man's work ($35, $30 advance).

Control Voltage (aka CV) plays Synopsis at 8 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 6.

Sunday

Another two-fer recommendation, this time in Eureka. At 2 p.m. at the Shanty, you will find a free matinee gig of two of the rompingest, stompin'-est, mightiest pub rock punk bands in the 707, when The Bow-Legged Buzzards join forces with the boys in The Smashed Glass to blow the lid off the patio.

If you still have gas in the tank by 8 p.m., head over to Synopsis on Union to enjoy a nice mix of ad hoc, DIY musical theater and sci-fi tales, courtesy of returning champs Faun Fables and local starlets Control Voltage (aka CV), both of which are returning from an appearance at Oregon's Lunasa Cascadia festival. This pairing of Drag City Records folk darlings with our own spacey trippers is certain to be a fine match for the elegantly styled interiors of Synopsis' new-ish home ($13, $10 advance).

Here's a night of punk in various forms from straight-up to folksy going down at the Siren's Song Tavern. Local distortion-mongers Dead Drift are hosting a show that includes Connecticut-based folk punker David Coffey Taylor and Irish-flavored local rippers Wyld Banshee Whispers. Just $10 gets you all three bands and everything kicks off at 8 p.m.

Tuesday

What was at a time thought to be a once-off flight of fancy has now become a recurring 2023 motif over at Savage Henry Comedy Club. I am, of course, referring to the Open Mark, a diverse open mic event hosted by — who else — comedian Mark Sanders. Participants are encouraged to show up with jokes, music and anything in between as a means of public expression. This 9 p.m. event is free at the door, so just bring your material and an I.D. if you intend to drink.

Wednesday

Forget it Jake, it's Chinatown. Or rather, a midsummer Wednesday in Humco with a soft breeze blowing through the places where there are usually bookings. Either way, local rules and customs supersede all other laws and there's nothing we can do to change that, Mr. Gittes. We'll just have to pack up and call it a night. ●

Collin Yeo (he/him) would like to offer a deep RIP to Pee Wee and Sinéad. Nothing compares to either of you, nor will anyone ever. He lives in Arcata.

Summer Puzzles

By Barry Evans

fieldnotes@northcoastjournal.com

Every year at this time, I check what I've dumped into my "puzzles" folder over the past 12 months. Hope you enjoy them as much as you enjoy the one or two hours when the sun shines here in coastal Humboldt. I think it's called "summer." The first is about as counterintuitive as any puzzle I've seen.

Surviving the Toss

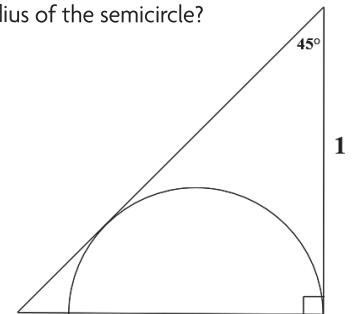

Alice and Bob have run afoul of the king, and are sentenced to be incarcerated in separate cells. They are told that every morning a guard will go first into Alice's cell and toss a coin, then into Bob's cell where he will do the same. Alice has to guess the outcome of the toss about to be witnessed by Bob, while Bob has to guess the result of Alice's toss. They get to live another day if one or both of them guess correctly, otherwise they are executed. Immediately after sentencing, they managed to confer for a few seconds before being led away to their respective cells. What strategy did they agree upon to always avoid execution?

Family

A woman and her husband have five sons. Each son has a sister. How many in the family?

Geometry Quickie

You can do this in your head! What's the radius of the semicircle?

Consonants

What's an English word composed of eight consonants and one vowel?

Punch

A woman went to a party and left early after drinking some punch. Everyone else who stayed later drank the punch and died from poisoning. How did she survive?

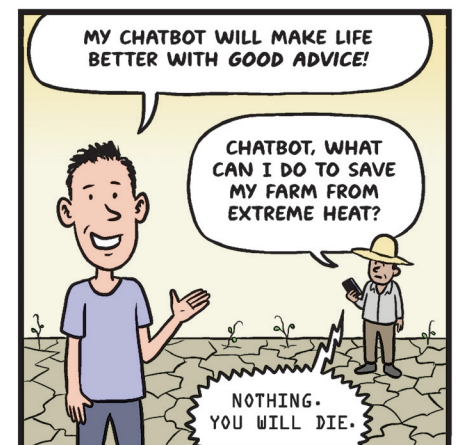

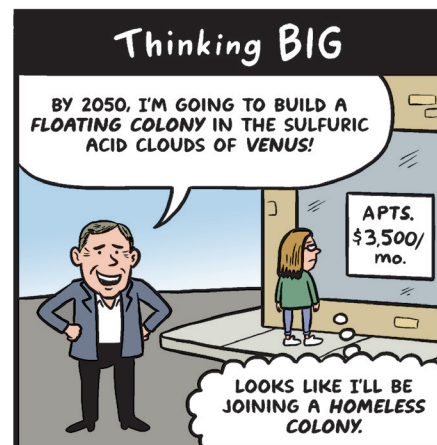

Finally ...

What gets wetter as it dries?

Barry Evans (he/him, barryevans9@yahoo.com) has a "use it or lose it" approach to his brain. Hence puzzles.

Talk to Me Makes Contact

By Jennifer Fumiko Cahill

jennifer@northcoastjournal.com

TALK TO ME. Australia, home to venomous brown snakes, saltwater crocodiles and a snail that can evidently kill you with a tiny harpoon-like tooth, is scary enough. Perhaps the steady baseline of adrenaline that comes from living in a country where a very large spider might casually drop out of your curtains makes scaring audiences there more challenging. Hence the maternal nightmare of The Babadook (2014). Twin brothers Danny and Michael Philippou, who worked on the crew of Babadook, make their joint directorial debut with Talk to Me, a mold-cracking Australian teen horror that simultaneously feels like an old-school summer scare and something fresh, freed from goofy conventions and distracting effects.

Talk to Me opens with a party spilling from a suburban home, an injured and nearly catatonic young man and a jolt of violence. In the background are teenagers giggling and filming the spectacle as the tension ratchets up. Elsewhere in Adelaide, smaller dramas are unfolding, as high schooler Mia (Sophie Wilde) distracts herself from the anniversary of her mother's death by hanging out with her friend Jade (Alexandra Jensen) and her younger brother Riley (Joe Bird). Mia is a perpetual outsider, either among the siblings or Jade and her boyfriend Dan (Otis Dhanji), whom Mia herself used to date. Even at home, she's not connecting with her grieving father Max (Marcus Johnson), her mother's absence and unanswered questions about her death looming between them.

The four teens sneak out to a party where the evening's entertainment emerges from a backpack: a white ceramic forearm covered in writing, its origins murky, the hand open for a shake. Yeah, don't touch that. But touch it they do, taking turns clasping the hand, seeing the gory dead sitting across from them and, to the cheering (and filming) of previously indifferent acquaintances, inviting spirits to possess them. Those who take the plunge loll their heads, their eyes gone wide and black, as they sing French songs in the style of Edith Piaf, roar and get demon-level freaky. Along with the thrill of occult shenanigans, the connection comes with a physical/metaphysical rush somehow intense enough to lure the kids back after seeing the hideous apparitions. Necromancy's a hell of a drug. There's a strict 90-second time limit, lest the spirits hang around and, yes, when that rule is broken, the visions and voices from the other side cross into the teens' realities with horrific consequences that connect to the film's opening scene.

The scares in Talk to Me are simple enough but deftly executed. The dead are rendered in varying states of decay, some bruised and gelatinous, droopy-eyed and waterlogged, as the sounds of sloshing water and creaking wood rise and fall. The wounds of the living are as hard to look at, as are their spasms and creepy writhings. (Wilde and Bird may owe me for a little lost sleep.) The pacing is steady and so is the drip of dread as reality becomes more tenuous and the aftereffects of the communing manifest themselves.

Unlike so many throwaway teen horror movies, though, we're invested in the subtly fleshed out characters and their often fraught relationships. Some of the credit goes to strong performances, especially by Wilde, who carries the emotional weight of the film. Before the craziness starts, we witness the circle of young people grapple with the loneliness, the anxieties of dating, grief and guilt. It may not be enough to break our hearts, but the story and its subplots call us back to the stumblings and frenetic energy of growing up. The teenagers here are not the hyper-sexualized walking tropes we expect to see making bad choices over a Ouija board at a sleepover party — in fact, it may be the first teen horror I've ever seen where nobody has sex. There are no stock mean girls, nerds or jocks placed here and there to drive the plot, and the characters' driving needs are not sex or popularity. Instead, touch, honest conversations, real connection and trust are what's hardest to come by. The isolation is heightened by the fleeting moments of closeness, as well as the walls, doors and screens between people. Coupled with the recklessness of youth (amped up by dares, a whooping crowd and the high of attention), it's a

Free Will Astrology

Week of Aug. 3, 2023

By Rob Brezсны

freewillastrology@freewillastrology.com

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emotions are not inconvenient distractions from reason and logic. They are key to the rigorous functioning of our rational minds. Neurologist Antonio Damasio proved this conclusively in his book Descartes' Error: Emotion, Reason, and the Human Brain. The French philosopher's famous formula—"I think, therefore I am"—offers an inadequate suggestion about how our intelligence works best. This is always true, but it will be especially crucial for you to keep in mind during the coming weeks. Here's your mantra, courtesy of another French philosopher, Blaise Pascal: "The heart has its reasons, which reason does not know."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The famous Taurus TV star Jay Leno once did a good deed for me. I was driving my Honda Accord on a freeway in Los Angeles when he drove up beside me in his classic Lamborghini. Using hand signals, he conveyed to me the fact that my trunk was open, and stuff was flying out. I waved in a gesture of thanks and pulled over onto the shoulder. I found that two books and a sweater were missing, but my laptop and briefcase remained. Hooray for Jay! In that spirit, Taurus, and in accordance with current astrological omens, I invite you to go out of your way to help and support strangers and friends alike. I believe it will lead to unexpected benefits.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): "Did you learn how to think or how to believe?" When my friend Amelie was nine years old, her father teased her with this query upon her return home from a day at school. It was a pivotal moment in her life. She began to develop an eagerness to question all she was told and taught. She cultivated a rebellious curiosity that kept her in a chronic state of delighted fascination. Being bored became virtually impossible. The whole world was her classroom. Can you guess her sign? Gemini! I invite you to make her your role model in the coming weeks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): In the coming weeks, I advise you not to wear garments like a transparent Gianfranco Ferre black mesh shirt with a faux-tiger fur vest and a coral-snake jacket that shimmers with bright harlequin hues. Why? Because you will have most success by being down-to-earth, straightforward, and in service to the fundamentals. I'm not implying you should be demure and reserved, however. On the contrary: I hope you will be bold and vivid as you present yourself with simple grace and lucid authenticity.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): In 1811, Leo scientist Amedeo Avogadro (1776-1856) formulated a previously unknown principle about the properties of molecules. Unfortunately, his revolutionary idea wasn't acknowledged and implemented until 1911, 100 years later. Today his well-proven theory is called Avogadro's law. According to my analysis of the astrological omens, Leo, you will experience your equivalent of his 1911 event in the coming months. You will receive your proper due. Your potential contributions will no longer be mere potential. Congratulations in advance!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Israeli poet Yona Wallach mourned the fact that her soul felt far too big for her, as if she were always wearing the clothes of a giant on her small body. I suspect you may be experiencing a comparable feeling right now, Virgo. If so, what can you do about it? The solution is NOT to shrink your soul. Instead, I hope you will expand your sense of who you are so your soul fits better. How might you do that? Here's a suggestion to get you started: Spend time summoning memories from throughout your past. Watch the story of your life unfurl like a movie.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Nineteenth-century Libran physician James Salisbury had strong ideas about the proper ingredients of a healthy diet. Vegetables were toxic, he believed. He created Salisbury steak, a dish made of ground beef and onions, and advised everyone to eat it three times a day. Best to wash it down with copious amounts of hot water and coffee, he said. I bring his kooky ideas to your attention in hopes of inspiring you to purge all bunkum and nonsense from your life—not just in relation to health issues, but everything. It's a favorable time to find out what's genuinely good and true for you. Do the necessary research and investigation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): "I'm amazed that anyone gets along!" marvels self-help author Sark. She says it's astonishing that love ever works at all, given our "idiosyncrasies, unconscious projections, re-stimulations from the past, and the relationship history of our partners." I share her wonderment. On the other hand, I am optimistic about your chances to cultivate interesting intimacy during the coming months. From an astrological perspective, you are primed to be extra wise and lucky about togetherness. If you send out a big welcome for the lessons of affection, collaboration, and synergy, those lessons will come in abundance.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Please don't make any of the following statements in the next three weeks: 1. "I took a shower with my clothes on." 2. "I prefer to work on solving a trivial little problem rather than an interesting dilemma that means a lot to me." 3. "I regard melancholy as a noble emotion that inspires my best work." On the other hand, Sagittarius, I invite you to make declarations like the following: 1. "I will not run away from the prospect of greater intimacy—even if it's scary to get closer to a person I care for." 2. "I will have fun exploring the possibilities of achieving more liberty and justice for myself." 3. "I will seek to learn interesting new truths about life from people who are unlike me."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Champions of the capitalist faith celebrate the fact that we consumers have over 100,000 brand names we can purchase. They say it's proof of our marvelous freedom of choice. Here's how I respond to their cheerleading: Yeah, I guess we should be glad we have the privilege of deciding which of 50 kinds of shampoo is best for us. But I also want to suggest that the profusion of these relatively inconsequential options may distract us from the fact that certain of our other choices are more limited. In the coming weeks, Capricorn, I invite you to ruminate about how you can expand your array of more important choices.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): My best friend in college was an Aquarius, as is my favorite cousin. Two ex-girlfriends are Aquarians, and so was my dad. The talented singer with whom I sang duets for years was an Aquarius. So I have intimate knowledge of the Aquarian nature. And in honor of your unbirthday—the time halfway between your last birthday and your next—I will tell you what I love most about you. No human is totally comfortable with change, but you are more so than others. To my delight, you are inclined to ignore the rule books and think differently. Is anyone better than you at coordinating your energies with a group's? I don't think so. And you're eager to see the big picture, which means you're less likely to get distracted by minor imperfections and transitory frustrations. Finally, you have a knack for seeing patterns that others find hard to discern. I adore you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Is the first sip always the best? Do you inevitably draw the most vivid enjoyment from the initial swig of coffee or beer? Similarly, are the first few bites of food the most delectable, and after that your taste buds get diminishing returns? Maybe these descriptions are often accurate, but I believe they will be less so for you in the coming weeks. There's a good chance that flavors will be best later in the drink or the meal. And that is a good metaphor for other activities, as well. The further you go into every experience, the greater the pleasure and satisfaction will be—and the more interesting the learning. ●

Answers to Summer Puzzles

Surviving the Toss: Either the two tosses come up the same (two heads or two tails) or different (one head, one tail). So one of them, say Alice, always says that Bob's toss will be the same as hers, e.g. she sees heads and guesses that Bob will get heads. Bob does the opposite, e.g. if he sees heads, he guesses Alice had tails. That way, one (and only one) of them will always be correct. (Doesn't that seem like magic? For the strategy to work, both Alice and Bob need to see the outcome of their own coin toss, even though it's totally uncorrelated to the outcome of the other's toss!)

Family: 8. Mother, father, five sons and one daughter.

Geometry Quickie: 0.44 approximately. $AD = AC = 1$ (since they're both tangent to the circle); $AB = \sqrt{2}$ (Pythagoras); draw radius OD to meet AB tangentially, so ODB is a right angle; triangle ODB is 90-45-45, so $DB = DO$; therefore radius = $BD = \sqrt{2} - 1 =$ approximately 0.44.

Consonants: Strengths. Anyone come up with another one?

Punch: The poison was in the ice cubes, which hadn't melted before she left. (Or: As suggested by the lawyer who proofed this before I submitted it, she put poison in the punch!)

Finally ... A towel. ●
